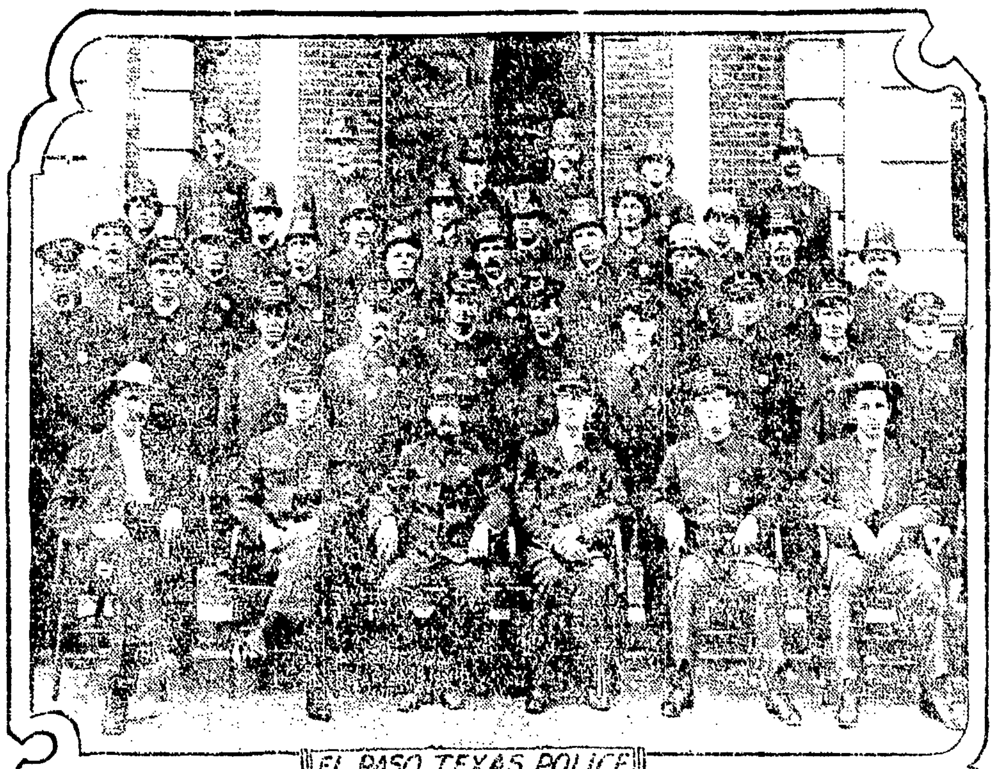
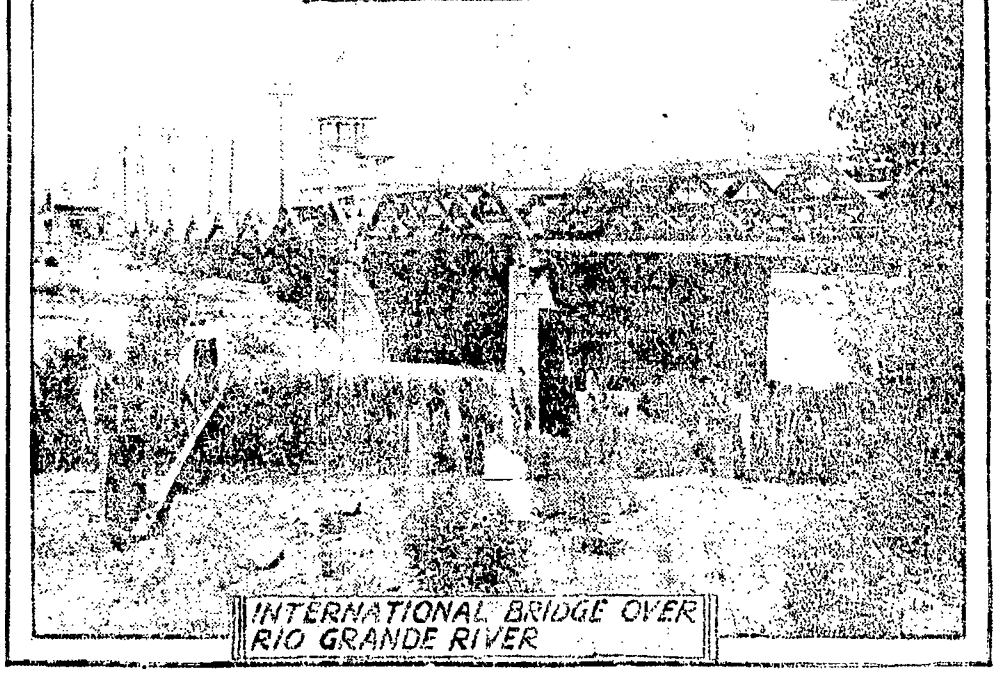
ARMS ARE BEING SMUGGLED ACROSS BORDER AT EL PASO FOR FRANCISCO I MADERO PARTY.



EL PASO, TEXAS POLICE



INTERNATIONAL BRIDGE OVER RIO GRANDE RIVER

Francisco I. Madero, who was jailed for opposing President Diaz, is supposed to be in old Mexico, ready to lead the revolutionary party. The United States has instructed troops to guard the Texas-Mexico border. At El Paso trouble has been expected. It is said arms are being smuggled over the line for the Madero party. Chief of Police Fisher, of El Paso, Texas, backed by Texas rangers, declares he can keep peace in his quarters.

MEXICAN REVOLT MOSTLY RUMORS

Reports Say Situation Is Exaggerated.

THE MOVEMENT IS WITHOUT A HEAD

Madero Tells Why People Are Dissatisfied.

President Diaz Declares Martial Law in Towns Where the Insurrection Shows Signs of Assuming Definite Form—Trouble Is Little More Than a Riot, Say Military Authorities—Rebels Take One Town.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 24.—Having now fully recovered from the excitement which attended the first insurrectionary outbreaks in Mexico, the situation does not look nearly so serious to the people. The Mexican government has made good its promise to maintain order so far as northern Mexico is concerned, and at present there is not a town infested by insurgents, while Mexican federal troops are again in control of every village and city in Durango and Chihuahua, where there has been trouble. Inflammatory statements sent out that Chihuahua was being attacked and that word had reached El Paso of Madero having proclaimed himself president have no basis.

Advices from every town in Chihuahua and Durango, where there has been a disturbance, say that everything is tranquil. Messages received here declare that all is quiet in Parral, Torreon, Gomez Palacio, Madera and Chihuahua. In many instances these have been confirmed from various other sources.

Many more refugees have arrived bringing news that federal troops had retaken all the towns and without further fighting, for the insurrectionists appear to have deserted the towns on hearing that second troops were coming.

Details arrived of the fighting at Gomez Palacio. It was not nearly so severe as at first reported, and the loss was not so heavy. There was never any fighting at Torreon, although several men are reported to have been shot for refusing to stand guard against the expected advance of the rebels when called on to do so.

Police Offer No Resistance.

There was fighting at San Ysadro, Guerrero and San Andreas, Chihuahua, in addition to the other places reported and at Minaca, a mining camp, several stores were looted, but no active fighting occurred, as there were no troops, and the police did not resist the band of a hundred insurgents who rode into the town and helped themselves to ammunition and supplies.

There was very little loss of life at San Ysadia, Guerrero and San Andreas, and neither of the towns was captured, according to official reports.

At San Andreas, near Madera, Chihuahua, which is again in the hands of regular troops, when the troop train was fired into on Monday, or an attempt made to dynamite it, nine soldiers, three women and a child were killed. This advice was received in Juarez by officials of the railroad, and is authentic.

Colonel Yepez commanded the [illegible] battalion. Confirmation is given the report that two Americans were killed in Parral, one named Lawton. They were shot accidentally, it is said, by richercheting bullets.

That there can not be much trouble along the line of the Mexican National railway between here and Mexico City was evidenced when the train arrived on time.

Explains Revolution.

Washington, Nov. 24.—Headquarters have been established in Washington by the Mexican revolutionary party. Gustavo A. Madero, a brother of General Francisco I. Madero, the leader of the revolution, arrived here and will remain for an indefinite period. He made this statement:

"Since the government of General Diaz and his representatives in this country have endeavored and are still endeavoring to cause it to appear, by statements given to the press that the revolutionary movement initiated by Francisco I. Madero finds active and sympathetic support among the anti-American element in Mexico, the confidential agent of the revolution in Washington authorizes an absolute, emphatic and categorical denial of the statements referred to.

"The revolution is directed against the personal and despotic government of General Diaz, the dictator and his oligarchy, by an outraged, betrayed and plundered people whose sole desire and hopes are to establish in Mexico a republican form of government, a government of law and order such as is obtained in the United States. Meanwhile the lives and interests of American citizens as well as those of other nations in Mexico, have been and will be most scrupulously respected and protected by the forces of the revolution, in accordance with the requirements of international law and modern usage."

Advices received indicated in the minds of officers of the state department that the revolutionary party has not been able thus far to concentrate its forces and that President Diaz is still apparently able to cope with the movement.

Little More Than Riot.

Matamoras, Mexico, Nov. 24.—Advices received by the Mexican military authorities here show that each armed band and force of revolutionists is operating independent of any general organization. So far as can be learned the seditionists are without a military head. In all the reports of uprisings and attacks upon towns by the insurrents the name of no leader or officer has been mentioned. The fighting that has so far been done has been altogether in the nature of rioting, with no well defined purpose in view. It is pointed out that while the situation is hard for the government to deal with, no fears are entertained as to the outcome, if for no other reason than that the revolutionists wholly lack a military leadership. The arrival of General Bernardo Reyes in Mexico would place a different phase on the situation, it is admitted by the government authorities. His more military personality would cause a rallying to his standard.

Diligent inquiry is being made by representatives of the government as to General Reyes' present whereabouts. It is stated on good authority that he disappeared from his home in Paris, France, three weeks ago. Fears are expressed that he may be nearing Mexico.

Takes No Chances.

City of Mexico, Nov. 24.—Martial law has been declared at Torreon, Chihuahua, Parral, Gomez Palacio, Nogales, Ciudad Juarez, Ciudad Porfirio Diaz and other towns of small importance. At all these places the stores are closed and no business is being transacted. In the city of Chihuahua a battalion of national guards is being organized to protect the city against insurgent attack. This city is supposed to be the center of the revolutionary conspiracy.

Official reports state that quiet prevails throughout the country, and that no new troubles have been reported. The authorities, however, are very vigilant, anticipating that the rebels are planning to make sudden attacks on various towns.

Persistent rumors are current that Francisco Madero, the rebel leader, has crossed the frontier, dressed as a rurale, and that he was heading towards the center of the revolutionary movement. As a measure of precaution all the fetes in connection with the inauguration of President Diaz have been postponed.

Insurgents Capture Town.

Eagle Pass, Tex., Nov. 24.—The mining town of Mapimi, about 50 miles from Torreon, is reported to have fallen into the hands of revolutionists. The news came over government wires to the military commander at Ciudad Porfirio Diaz, opposite Eagle Pass. There are some large American-owned mines at Mapimi. Fighting is reported at San Pedro, also in the Torreon district.

BATH TUB LUXURIES NOT FOR FOREIGNERS

Gary, Indiana, Steel Men Investigate Some Matters.

Gary, Ind., Nov. 24.—The United States Steel corporation has found that some citizens of Gary do not like baths. Three years ago the corporation built several two-story houses in the East End for the accommodation of 600 of its employes. All modern conveniences were provided, including bath tubs.

Recently the New York office asked how the men were taking to the improvement and an investigation showed that all the hundred or more tubs were being used for storage places for old clothes, and in fact for every purpose except the one for which they were intended.

No more bath tubs will be supplied the foreigners. Contracts for new houses let yesterday, do not include such luxuries.

FARMER REPORTED KILLED BY THIEVES

Kenton Authorities Start To Investigate Rumors.

Kenton, O., Nov. 24.—The authorities, yesterday afternoon, started to investigate evidence that robbers had murdered John J. Staley, eighty-four, cut off his head and then burned his body on his farm between Ada and LaFayette.

Neighbors of Staley reported the case to both county seats, Kenton and Lima. They said that Staley was reputed to have kept a large sum in his house, and neighbors, attracted by a fire late last night, went to Staley's home to find it nearly consumed by flames. After a search of the ruins the trunk of Staley's body, with one arm and the legs attached, was found. The head and the other arm was missing

PRESIDENT EXPLAINS WAGE DISAGREEMENT

Takes Up Matter of Settling the Disputes.

Lewis Declares Predecessor in Capacity as Chairman of Civic Federation Has Done Nothing To Promote Peace Between Employer and Employe—Tells Miners To Resent Interference.

Indianapolis, Nov. 24.—Tom Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, has an article in the current number of the association's organ that virtually charges that the failure to re-establish interstate wage agreement was due to traitors in the organization. In discussing the question he points out that John Mitchell, former president of the miners, retired voluntarily from the presidency of the United Mine Workers and became chairman of the trade agreement department of the Civic Federation.

"What," he adds, "has the Civic Federation done to establish or promote trade agreements between employer and employe?"

He adds that W. D. Ryan, former secretary of the miners and H. C. Perry, former president of the Illinois organization, have retired and are now employed by coal operators. He says he does not wish to criticise the men who left the movement to represent the employers of labor, but he believes every member of the United Mine Workers should resent any interference with the policies of the United Mine Workers by men who are in the service and paid by the employers of labor. He concludes by declaring that "the disposition of a few of the miners' leaders to favor certain operators to the disadvantage of their competitors has also done much to prevent the complete success of the interstate joint movement in arranging wage contracts on a basis that is fair and equitable to all concerned."

DREXEL MAKES NEW ALTITUDE FLIGHT

Philadelphian Ascends to Height of 9,970 Feet.

Philadelphia, Nov. 24.—At the Point Breeze track, J. Armstrong Drexel disappeared into the clouds, passed a 100-horsepower Bleriot monoplane almost two miles into the air and won for himself a new world's altitude record for aeroplanes when he hung at a height of 9,970 feet in the mists above Ambler before a six-mile down glide which landed him and his machine in an open field at Oreland, a suburb 13 miles north of this city.

For 30 minutes before he landed Drexel underwent one of the most remarkable experiences that are recorded even in the annals of aviation. The official barograph of the Aero Club of America, slung on the frame of the machine in plain view had registered the record-breaking height when he found that his propeller had lost its lifting power owing to the lightness of the air at that great altitude. For almost half an hour, while out of sight of earth, he jumped and jockeyed the machine in an effort to force the wavering needle to the 10,000-foot mark, and failed.

An examination of the instrument afterwards showed that the ink had run out of the registering needle at the 9,970 mark, and that the aviator possibly should have to his credit a flight of a good deal more than 10,000 feet upward.

CREWS MUTINY AT RIO DE JANEIRO

The Situation Is Considered Critical.

Mutineers Are Joined by Officers and Guns Are Trained on the City—Business Suspends and Negotiations Are On To Settle Trouble Which Begins Through Poor Pay of Sailors on Ships.

London, Nov. 24.—According to a private dispatch received here, the crews of the Brazilian warships at anchor in the harbor at Rio de Janeiro have mutinied, and are bombarding the city. It adds that all the English engineers are safe. The dispatch, which gives no details, was sent to reassure the friends of about 50 Barrow engineers who took the warships San Paolo and Mines Geraes to Brazil.

A Brazilian merchant in London has received a telegram from an official Brazilian source that the disturbance is of small dimensions and is due to the sailors' discontent with their pay.

A cablegram received this morning states that business in the Brazilian capital had completely stopped. The situation is described as critical, but negotiations are going on between the rival parties. The telegram refers vaguely to naval movements that are progressing.

Information from other private sources indicates that the trouble is a mutiny of the fleet, and that the officers and crews are in possession of the ships.

The Brazilian legation here says that the crew of only one battleship is mutinous. It is added that the trouble is nonpolitical, and that the city is not disturbed.

EXPERT WILEY SAYS HE HAS SURE CURE

Declares Publicity Will Benefit Farmer and Consumer.

Pittsburg, Nov. 24.—"The prices paid by the consumer for foodstuffs today loom up like the Washington monument, while the prices received by the farmer look like an humble gravestone," said Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, government chemist and pure food expert.

"I am a farmer," said Dr. Wiley, "and what I want to see is the cost of things reduced to the consumer and at the same time have the farmers' returns increased. Publicity, publicity and more publicity, will equalize these things. Hammer at the middleman's profits day and night and in time he'll have to pay the farmer more and charge the consumer less. Publicity was what made the pure food law. Enough of it will wipe out the difference between the 5 cents that the farmer gets for his steer to the price the housewife pays for the porterhouse steak."

TAFT AGAINST EXTRA SESSION

President Settles Down to Task of Writing Message.

Washington, Nov. 24.—President Taft is again in Washington, and today began work on his annual message to congress. He will give serious consideration to a number of important appointments soon to be made.

It is not likely that the president will make any sweeping recommendations for tariff legislation, although he may submit to congress certain conclusions based upon the investigations conducted by the tariff board, especially as to paper and wood pulp, and possibly on the woolen and cotton schedules. It is the opinion of those who have talked with the president that he has no intention of calling a special session of congress to deal with the tariff, as has been suggested to him by some of his political friends.

REAL BLOODSHED IN FRENCH DUELS

Honor Is Now Perfectly Satisfied

PARTICIPANTS NOT SERIOUSLY HURT

Duelists Use Frog Stickers and Revolvers

Count de Castellane Shoots Count [illegible] L'Estang and George Casella Punches His Little Rapier Into [illegible] Marnold—Surgeons Patch Up Wounds of Both Men and Thus Honor Is Avenged

Paris, Nov. 21.—Real blood was [illegible] in two French duels today. [illegible] Count Raymond de Castellane [illegible] Count Boni, shooting Count [illegible] L'Estang [illegible] in the first duel and George Casella punching his rapier through [illegible] Marnold's arm in the second affair. None of the participants was seriously wounded and honor was perfectly satisfied.

The encounter between De Castellane and De L'Estang followed a brawl in a skating rink. De L'Estang did not like De Castellane and during the grand parade when [illegible] French society was trying to skate and be graceful at the same time De L'Estang tripped Count Raymond, causing him to fall with an unseemly lack of dignity to the floor. Raymond, with that fiery impetuosity of the De Castellane [illegible] that was so often manifested [illegible] Count Boni when he slapped his [illegible], immediately sent his seconds to wait upon De L'Estang and [illegible] offices for two were arranged.

[illegible] Hotel [illegible] of Napoleon was [illegible] and this morning at daybreak, just as they do in novels, De Castellane and De L'Estang and their seconds met [illegible] the great [illegible] near the Champs de [illegible].

On Safe Side

The two principals were attired in conventional black and wore soft shirts open at the throat so each could see that neither wore a coat of mail. For a while this was a gentleman's affair and it was thought [illegible] on the safe side. They selected their rapiers with great [illegible] but the [illegible] temper gazed at them [illegible] they really believed it [illegible] their last look [illegible] as though they actually [illegible] it might be [illegible] [illegible] stood [illegible].

[illegible] and thrusts [illegible]. It was really some fine [illegible] American sporting men [illegible] the first round ended [illegible] and blood unshed. In [illegible] round De Castellane [illegible] superiority with the foils [illegible] looked to see him [illegible] twist of the wrist [illegible] heroes sometimes do. [illegible] was not to be [illegible] De Castellane thrust for [illegible] his sword pierced the [illegible] his foe's sword arm. De L'Estang, helpless, dropped his [illegible] and stood at the mercy of his [illegible].

Uses Frog Sticker.

But De Castellane did not kill [illegible] on the spot. No French duelist would stick a sword into an unarmed [illegible].

Honors having been thus repaired, surgeons patched up De L'Estang's punctured arm.

Georges Casella and Jean Marnold stood and watched the blood flow without a murmur. It takes a brave man to see other wounds and realize that it will be his turn in a few minutes. But Casella and Marnold had their alarm clocks to [illegible] and [illegible] at this unseemly hour for the purpose of slaying each other, so they carefully shed their coats and bared their breasts for [illegible] had written [illegible]—whatever that [illegible]—against Casella in one of the newspapers and honor [illegible] to be avenged.

In an instant they were at it. Casella was the best swordsman and [illegible] his frog sticker brought Marnold's arm over as De Castellane had done to De L'Estang. Thus more honor was avenged.

Rev. Mr. Lynch Can Not See Much Difference Between Man Living Unmarried with a Woman and Living Married to Her Only for Short Period—Says State of Affairs Must Be Changed

New York, Nov. 21.—What is the difference between a man asking a woman to live with him for a short period of married life which often happens today and that man living with a woman he has not married? Light of World Has Gone, Says the Countess

Body of Dreamer and Author Will Be Laid to Rest at Foot of Poverty Oak Where Peasants Whom Count Loves Are Wont to Congregate—No Church Ceremony for Dead Russian Writer

St. Petersburg, Nov. 21.—Count Leo Tolstoi died at Astapova [illegible] this morning ten days after he left his home at Yasnaya Polyana in search of solitude and peace of soul.

The physicians allowed his wife and family to enter the death chamber but the count was unconscious. There were six doctors in attendance, two of them being heart specialists who had been summoned from Moscow. Their presence drew a characteristic remark from the patient when he was recovering from the second of three violent cardiac attacks which preceded his last hours.

"There are millions of people in the world," said the dying count, "and many of them are suffering. Why then are you all around the bed of one sick man?"

These are said to have been his last coherent words, although he lived several hours after uttering them. When he recovered from a previous attack he took the hand of his eldest daughter [illegible] who was beside his bed and said "Now comes death. That's all!"

For ten hours the third seizure left him so weak that the physicians saw that [illegible] was hopeless and then they admitted the countess.

Villagers Show Respect

Shortly after death the body was clothed in the black shirt and other [illegible] garments which Tolstoi habitually wore. The expression of the face was peaceful and natural. The villagers decked the death room [illegible] pine boughs and afterwards the residents of the neighborhood of all classes and ages and many from a distance walked past the bier. [illegible] majority of these mourners were peasants and school children.

The count did not make any reconciliation with the church. There are contradictory reports of attempts of ecclesiastics to visit his deathbed. It [illegible] said that the bishop of Kaluga was admitted during his sickness and conversed with him. Another story is that the abbot and a monk from the Optin monastery which Tolstoi visited enroute to Schamardinsky spent some time at his bedside Friday, but this is denied elsewhere and the monk and the abbot are said to have vainly waited in a railway car for two days and nights hoping to see the count. There is also an improbable story of a priest trying to force an entrance into the sick room.

By Poverty Oak

Yasnaya Poliana, Russia, Nov. 21.—Amid pomp and ceremony which he loathed in life, encased in a rare casket which he would have shunned as an evil thing, the body of Leo Nicholaevich Count Tolstoi, writer, dreamer and idealist, will be brought back today to his home here to be laid to rest as he had wished at the foot of poverty oak, where the peasants he loved are wont to congregate.

No church ceremony will mark the final obsequies of the great man, great in death as in life. The church—the Greek Catholic church—which excommunicated Tolstoi in 1901 after the world had read his "Resurrection," held out the hand of forgiveness to him to the last and he refused. The funeral will take place tomorrow.

Fearing outbreaks the police of many neighboring districts are gathering here today. Troops may be sent ostensibly [illegible] a mark of the government's respect, but really to prevent violent [illegible].

Already there is talk of legal complications between members of [illegible] Tolstoi family and M. Tchertkoff, Tolstoi's English representative, regarding [illegible] of the count's manuscripts, including his unpublished [illegible]. The manuscripts are held by Tchertkoff, who is bound by Tolstoi to give them to the world [illegible] in furtherance of his ideals [illegible] land and money.

Countess Faints

[illegible] given to the world [illegible] his family [illegible] would turn the [illegible] and pauperize [illegible]. It was a quarrel over this which is said to [illegible].

[illegible] at Astapova, where he had gone with his physician [illegible] was taken ill en train. All day long Sunday the body, clad in [illegible], lay in state [illegible] gazed with reverence on his face. The aged Countess Tolstoi sat by the coffin and repeatedly kissed the dead brow. "The light of the world has gone," she cried.

The abbot of Vasonansky waited outside to give the last rites but was denied. The church is therefore decided to leave things as they are. Countess Tolstoi fainted when she was told no requiem could be sung. Tolstoi received the mildest form of church punishment, excommunication. He was [illegible] and a priest [illegible] his own [illegible] officiate [illegible] a requiem mass. Radical priests [illegible] several parts of the empire have sung the mass for the dead.

Washington, Nov. 21.—Henry [illegible] Hoyt, counsellor for the department of state, died at his home here. He had been ill for several weeks and death was not unexpected. He was first to fill the position of counsellor to the state department. He had recently returned from Canada where he had been engaged in negotiations looking to reciprocity between Canada and this country.

WIFE SLASHES HER HUSBAND

A Woman's Nightmare May Cost Life of Elyria Man

Elyria, O., Nov. 21.—Lester Richards, thirty-two, lies near death in the hospital today as the result of a deep gash in his throat which his wife is alleged to have inflicted with a razor in a nightmare shortly after midnight. Police are guarding the woman at her home, Mendel court, pending the outcome of Richards's wound and a statement from him.

Richards was awakened between 12 and 1 a. m. today to see his wife bending over him with a razor in her hand. She seemed to be asleep and was murmuring incoherently. Before he could escape, he told the police, she gashed him with the razor.

The Richards have two little children.

Moody from the bench of the supreme court has become effective, reducing the membership of the court to seven and leaving two vacancies to be filled by President Taft. Congress at the last session passed an act permitting Mr. Moody to retire on full pay.

The name of United States Senator Thomas H. Carter, who was defeated for reelection, is being mentioned as a possible successor to Mr. Moody.

Engineer's Report Referring to Health of Workers on Canal Shows Daily Average of Sick Is 2301 in Every 1000 and Deaths Average 1084 in Every 1000 Men Employed

Washington, Nov. 21.—Colonel George W. Goethals, the engineer in charge of the construction of the Panama canal, has submitted his annual report to Secretary of War Dickinson and the same has been made public. In this report Colonel Goethals discusses the big slides in the Culebra cut which have impeded the progress of the work. The colonel says:

"Previous to the fiscal year the movement of material into the prism was due almost entirely to slides caused by the movement of the top layer of clay on smooth sloping surfaces of rock or other material harder than the clay. In addition to the slides however several breaks exist in the banks of the canal. At the points where these breaks exist the underlying rock is of poor quality and is [illegible] by vertical seams sloping toward the canal."

The average number of old employes on the roll of the commission this year was [illegible] and on the rolls of the Panama railroad [illegible] a total of [illegible] laborers recruited during the year aggregated 2519, all West Indians and most of them from Barbados.

The report says that the last recruiting was done in January, 1910, and since that date immigration has exceeded emigration. Colonel Goethals adds that as the work has reached its maximum the present population of the zone furnishes an ample labor supply. There are now [illegible] buildings in the canal zone owned by the commission. The total amount of material received from the United States during the year aggregated [illegible] tons, valued at $10,[illegible].

Uncle Sam Good Host

Uncle Sam, according to Colonel Goethals' report, is running 19 hotels on the isthmus, 11 European laborers' messes and 20 common laborers' kitchens. On Uncle Sam's best hotel on the isthmus he made a profit for the year of $4,[illegible].

During the year 6,907 arrests were made in the canal zone, which is an increase of 6[illegible]2 over the number of the previous year. During the year 12 schools for white and 15 for colored children were maintained. In the course of the year also a paid fire company was established at Gatun and a fire alarm system installed.

The daily average of sick in the canal zone was 2[illegible].01 out of every 1,000 employed, as against 2[illegible].49 for the preceding year. The total number of deaths among employes was only 548, equivalent to an average of 10.84 per thousand.

Colonel Goethals reports show that considerable work already has been done on devices for the handling of vessels and protection of them. Among other things he says a design has been prepared for an electric locomotive which it is thought will prove satisfactory to tow vessels through the lock and have full control of them from the time they approach until they are locked through to a point where they can proceed under their own steam.

PROPERTY OWNERS MAKING PROTESTS

Columbus Citizens Say New Appraisement Is Not Satisfactory

Columbus, O., Nov. 21.—A [illegible] is given the work of the board of quadrennial appraisers today in a reply of [illegible] president of the board of review to County Auditor Beyers, who asked for the board's opinion on the efficiency of the last appraisement.

[illegible] does not agree with Beyers that the work must be done over, he says.

Considering the general dissatisfaction expressed by more than 1,000 property owners, the new appraisement is far from satisfactory and will require a great amount of equalizing and [illegible].

WOMAN WILL TRY HER SIXTH SPOUSE

She Declares She Has Drawn Blanks in the Past

Washington, D. C., Nov. 21.—After suffering five matrimonial disappointments Mrs. W. C. White today set about to get her sixth spouse out of the workhouse and announced that if he did not reform she would get a divorce from him and try a seventh. Mrs. White is just thirty years old.

"I have certainly drawn blanks in my life," she said. "Out of the five husbands I have had the only two good ones died in less than a year. I married the first when I was fourteen in Charleston, West Virginia."

She then [illegible] "I have been having the worst kind of luck. I got one out of the pen after he had shot a saloon keeper, but he did not reform, and another turned out to be a Sing Sing convict on parole. I am now counting on Bill. [illegible] he quits drinking he'll be all right and I'll manage to give him the chance."

It looked as if the chance might be futile for another woman claiming to be the original Mrs. White who was waiting for the prisoner, and the woman of six husbands was informed that her right to Bill was contested.

SCARFPIN STOPS SPEEDING BULLET

Human Target Owes His Life to Big Yellow Stone

New York, Nov. 21.—A scarf pin worn by Samuel Alkon caught a bullet fired at him. Alkon and two friends were walking near Broome street when two men passed them. One was Louis Brody and the other Samuel Goldberg. Goldberg called to Alkon and he turned. As he did so Brody, who was less than six feet away, fired two shots from his revolver. One missed. The other struck Alkon's scarf pin, an oval yellow stone surrounded by a metal band. The yellow stone in the center was knocked out and the bullet mushroomed by contact with it. It was caught in the metal circlet. It completely filled the cavity left by the vanished yellow stone.

Ashland, O., Nov. 21.—Stolen gas caused an explosion that wrecked the home of Loren Shopbell and resulted in his death early today.

The Logan Natural Gas company shut off the gas at Shopbell's home last spring and took out the [illegible]. Yesterday he connected the pipe himself and turned on the gas at the street valve by means of an improvised key and enjoyed its warmth all day.

In the night his wife arose declaring that she smelled gas. He laughed at her fears but started out to investigate. The gas seemed to [illegible] upstairs. "Don't take any matches," his wife called to him.

"There's no danger," he retorted, grabbing a bunch.

A moment later there was an explosion that blew the entire front out of the house and shook the town for many blocks. Shopbell was blown into his front yard. MANY KILLED IN THE REVOLUTION

Soldiers Fire Upon Mexican Rioters

MADERO, THE LEADER, VANISHES QUICKLY

Sleuths Are Hot Upon His Trail

Mexican Government Maintains Strict News Censorship but Admits Fact When Pressed for Truth—Armed Natives Cross Rio Grande To Fight Against Diaz Plans of Diaz

Eagle Pass, Tex., Nov. 21.—In a pitched battle between government and revolutionary forces at Zacatecas four hundred persons were killed according to official advices which have been received at Ciudad Porfirio Diaz across the border but have been carefully withheld from the American side. The news comes direct from various sources on the Mexican side but so well has the telegraph been censored that not a word leaked to the American side until railroad men brought information and a demand on the Mexican officials [illegible] confirmation.

Revolutionists following the plan adopted at Puebla last week when [illegible] men and women were killed [illegible] and [illegible] a fusillade on the soldiers. The details of the engagement are lacking but the positive fact remains that 400 persons, mostly rebels, were killed.

American Consul Luther T. Ellsworth has received information concerning the battle but the Mexican officials have minimized to him the loss of life. His report says that less than 100 were killed.

Revolutionary riots occurred at Allende near Ciudad Porfirio Diaz, at Irapuato and at other places, but owing to the censorship the facts have not been given publicity except [illegible] admissions that the soldiers were compelled to fire into mobs of [illegible].

Two cars of guns and ammunition intended for the rebels have been seized at San Antonio. As much as $1,000,000 has been spent for munitions of war by the Maderos. Arms have been seized here, at Del Rio and at Laredo. The whole border on [illegible] of the Rio Grande is [illegible] and every indication points [illegible] a revolution of magnitude unless Madero is captured.

Customs Guards Turned Back

At Santa Maria, near Del Rio, Tex., a recent patrol of 15 rebels met two American custom guards who had been detailed to watch their actions. The rebels drew their weapons and commanded the guards to return to Del Rio and not molest them. The Americans did so, making a report to Deputy Customs Collector [illegible] Lowe. Lowe reported to Ellsworth here and was instructed to take a force of Americans and scatter the rebels. No later report has been received. It is believed they have engaged the rebel troops, hundreds of whom were crossing from the American to the Mexican side.

Consul Ellsworth sent an urgent wire to General Hoyt, commander of the department of Texas at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, asking him to order two regiments of cavalry now at Fort Clark to Eagle Pass in preparations for emergencies. Hoyt [illegible] not refuse but said he had to have orders from Washington, and Ellsworth took the matter up with Washington. Troops are expected from both Fort Sam Houston and Fort Clark.

Francisco Madero, leader of the revolutionary movement, has apparently slipped through the hands of [illegible] American officials and is believed to be in Mexico. The force from here spent the night in the [illegible] not a quarter of a mile from Madero's camp. [illegible] this morning that he had evaded [illegible] Mexico [illegible] points and he will [illegible] fight.

JOHNSTONE VICTIM OF CARELESSNESS

Broken Biplane Had Been Bungled in Repairs

Denver, Col., Nov. 21.—Earl [illegible] duty under Ralph Johnstone's biplane [illegible] he [illegible] picked up a piece of [illegible] wood which fell at his feet. It [illegible]. One end bore the marks of an iron ring which [illegible] held in place by two [illegible].

When Hoxsey saw it he said it was from Johnstone's machine and had been split Thursday when Johnstone's machine got out of order. In repairing it the placing was badly done and the holes for the two nails which held the iron ring on had been punched or bored by something larger than the nail. While Johnstone was 800 feet up the nails worked out, the ring slipped off and the fragment of wood fell, mute evidence that bungling work in repairing the biplane cost the life of Johnstone.

SPEEDY TRAINS FROM CHICAGO TO NEW YORK

Ninety Per Cent of Trains Reach New York City on Scheduled Time—The Outlook for Business on the Erie Is Fine—Notes from Local Railway Yards

A factor which has been largely instrumental in building up the ton[illegible] of the Erie is the promptness of its through freight service at the present time. It is claimed that the company today makes better time on its through freight from Chicago to New York than any other line op[illegible] between those two centers.

The average number of loaded cars handled by the company on its through freight business between Chicago and New York is [illegible] and during the past three months over ninety per cent of such trains have reported [illegible] York on schedule time. FORMER MARION MAN JAILED IN COLUMBUS

Takes a Joy Ride With the Governor's Auto

GOVERNOR HARMON IS IN POLICE COURT

Testifies Against Frederick Preuninger Who Serves as Chauffeur for the Governor—Auto Taken from Garage Without Permission of the Owner—Detective Makes Arrest

Frederick Preuninger, a former Marion young man and member of D company until about three months ago, is in trouble in Columbus and in addition to paying a fine must serve a term in jail.

In regard to the affair the Columbus Citizen of Tuesday says:

Judson Harmon, governor of Ohio, made his first appearance in the Columbus police court Monday when he testified against Fred Preuninger, who has been his chauffeur since September 22.

Preuninger was arrested at 3 o'clock Sunday morning by Detective Nolan. The police had noticed an automobile standing in front of a south Scioto street resort near Capital alley. The number was secured and traced. It proved to be the machine of Governor Harmon. The chauffeur was located and locked up.

Governor Harmon was called out of bed at [illegible] o'clock Sunday morning and directed the police to prosecute the man to the full extent of the law. Preuninger was charged with taking the governor's automobile without permission.

In police court Monday Preuninger pleaded guilty and confessed that he had started out with the governor's machine at 8 o'clock Saturday night accompanied by a party of friends. He said [illegible] of his friends [illegible] men.

Acting Police Judge Randolph Walton said he wanted to know more about the case after the plea of guilty was entered and Governor Harmon was summoned. FOURTH ANNUAL SHOW OF FANCIERS' CLUB

A Big Display at Former Racket Store Room

SHOW WILL CONTINUE THROUGHOUT WEEK

The Room Is Arranged To Accommodate 3500 Birds and the Pet Stock—The Judging Is Begun by I. C. Bean, Fancier of Merit—The Managers Are Pleased With Show

Crowing roosters, cackling hens, barking dogs and squealing monkeys marked the opening of the fourth annual show of the Marion Fanciers club in the room formerly occupied by the Racket store on south Main street Tuesday. It is one of the largest and best shows ever given in Marion.

The show will not be closed until Saturday. It is estimated that over [illegible]00 fancy fowls are on exhibition. The room is well arranged for the exhibition it being large enough to accommodate 3[illegible]00 birds and sufficient space for pet stock.

The judging was begun promptly Tuesday by I. C. Bean of Collegeville, Pennsylvania. On account of the early dates for the local show it affords fanciers plenty of time to have their birds scored before the larger shows begin.

The rose comb reds form the biggest class on display with the barred rocks a close second.

Those at the head of the show say that they expect to fulfill every promise made and assert that they intend to make an enviable record that shall be maintained in the future.

The premiums are liberal with a big list of specials. A large attendance is assured.

The officers of the Marion Fanciers company are:

A. Klerx, president; O. Wollenweber, vice president; M. G. Dickerson, secretary; William Ries, Sr., treasurer; M. B. Dickerson, assistant secretary.

THE GREATEST TRIAL

By William T. Ellis

The International Sunday School Lesson for November 27 is The Trial of Jesus. Matthew 26 57-68.

[illegible] a [illegible] of [illegible] of the [illegible] the [illegible] filled with the concerning [illegible] conditions in their country [illegible] to [illegible] for justice [illegible] equity [illegible] will come. The form of government has changed in [illegible] but the cruel oppression of the Christian still continues.

[illegible] conference in an upper room above [illegible] city sets the mind to [illegible] the long train of outrages upon justice that have marred the course of this historic land. But the foulest of all the miscarriages of justice, not only in the land of [illegible] but also in all the world was that which the Sunday school of today studies, the trial of Jesus of Nazareth. Human wickedness seems to have reached its climax in the trial and death of Jesus. He suffered unjustly but thereby he became the champion of all who [illegible] the blows of unjust power. His passion is today the hope of the weak and the overborne.

Memorials That Remain

Travel about Great Britain and Europe and you will see occasional vestiges of the Roman occupation. Go to Asia Minor and Syria and there will appear many remnants of the grandeur that was Rome, but all are ruins, ruins, ruins. In sharp contrast behold the memorials of this passive Victim of Rome's supine injustice and of [illegible] hatred. Go where you will upon the earth save into the densest darkness of paganism and of Islam and there you will find evidences of the present and increasing potency of the Crucified.

History holds no more dramatic evidence that the years of God are with truth. [illegible] dust and Jews are [illegible] wanderers on the face of the earth since the supreme tragedy from [illegible] the modern world dates its calendars. There is hope and [illegible] for every ill-treated servant of truth in this familiar view [illegible] justice. The cries of all the [illegible] and persecuted and downtrodden [illegible] of earth have [illegible] with Him who once stood [illegible] and spitting and shame before [illegible] tribunals. Says Lowell:

Though [illegible] prosper
Yet [illegible] alone is strong,
And [illegible] out [illegible] now
[illegible] throne
Troops [illegible] tall angels to enshield her from all wrong.

Incidents of the Event

[illegible] deepest into the [illegible] Jesus was not the soldier [illegible] but the perfidy of Judas. [illegible] that friend may fall so far. Judas not only led the temple police and the soldiers to his retreat [illegible] olive leave but he indicated Him by a kiss and as the Greek shows he kissed Him [illegible] with clinging demonstrative affection. The horrible picture is enough to make even base men gird up the loins of his loyalty and resolve that come what may he will be true to his friends.

Then there was Peter's attempted improvement upon God's program. He slashed about with his sword and lopped off a servant's ear and he might well have complicated the case of his Master. There are many modern methods that strive to better God's way of doing things. Worldly wisdom and twentieth century aggressiveness are poor substitutes for the divine will.

Darting out of the darkness for an instant into the flare of those torches and this immortal story is a young man clad only in linen cloth which the captors of Jesus seized when they discerned His friendship for the prisoner and he fled naked into the night. Probably the young man was John Mark himself. At least he stands for the untribulated friends of Jesus. In Nagasaki they keep a feast which they call The Discovery of the Christians when a large number of secret disciples, descendants of the Christians in Japan whose faith [illegible]00 years of persecution had failed to stamp out appeared when the day of religious liberty dawned and confessed themselves Christians. There are more friends and disciples of Jesus in the world than appear on the church rolls.

Justice for the Disliked

The malignity which hounded Jesus throughout his trials before Annas, the Sanhedrim and Pilate make the judicial nature of the proceedings farcical. He was tried by His foes. They were not big enough or brave enough to be fair to a foe. Some persons are, every civilized man pretends to be or desires to be. Said a religious leader recently concerning a man who has made himself odious by his methods of heresy hunting: "He is the squarest fighter I know. I have had to oppose him many times and I think he is narrow and intolerant but he is fair and just so far as he is able to be so."

This is [illegible] test of character. It is exceedingly difficult to keep poise of mind toward a rival or a person who has injured us or whom for any reason whatsoever we dislike. That spirit of justice is essential to the true disciple. The suspicious, the impulsive and the persons of strong feeling have a field for the exercise of their Christian virtues in the keeping of an open and a generous mind toward all whom they are prone to regard with antagonism.

The Jews could not do this. The [illegible] plotters and persecutors [illegible] judged Jesus unfairly and thereby forfeited their right to the high and honorable office they held. A judge who perverts justice is a worse foe of [illegible] than the highwayman who [illegible] and murders. Well does the Bible arraign the unjust judge. Such were the members of the Sanhedrin on this occasion.

The sublime courage and kingliness of Jesus in remaining silent throughout most the ordeals of His three trials is perhaps the outstanding fact of the trial. When in full and official legal form He was abjured to make known whether or not He was the Christ He affirmed that He was. For the most part He held His peace. That in itself is a mark of strength. The weakling fusses and fumes, the strong man stands silent.

Some things [illegible] to be endured. That is a great message from the trial of Jesus. The way He faced His great test is the way in which His disciples should meet the pin pricks and petty annoyances of life. To suffer in silence and cheerful silence is to follow in the train of the victorious Christ.

Out of man's injustice came the larger justice of God. Christ endured wrong that wrongs might end in the earth. The hope of [illegible] Congo blacks of [illegible] still downtrodden Armenians of the [illegible] and Poles, of the victims of alcohol and opium, lies in the [illegible] of which Christ is the champion and leader.

MAY LOSE HIS ABSOLUTE RULE

Assemblymen Plan To Kill Speaker's Power

CANNONISM IN LOWER HOUSE

Is Being Warmly Discussed in Capital City

Ohio Assemblymen Assert That Special Interests Are Trying To Control By Committees—They Want to Break Up the Practice of Logrolling—Harmon Considers the Proposition Today

Columbus, O., Nov. 22.—Power of arbitrarily controlling the make-up of the [illegible] committees of the house of representatives may be taken away from the next speaker [illegible] that candidate for [illegible] order [illegible] chairman [illegible] the most powerful committees in the house has been responsible for a movement to put the naming of the committees in the hands of a committee on committees [illegible] as is done in the senate.

While Governor Harmon has not declared himself on the proposition it is understood that he is considering it [illegible] A demand that such procedure be followed probably will be made at the caucus of Democratic members of the house which it is [illegible] will be held the week before the convening of the session. Behind the movement is a [illegible] to break up the practice of [illegible] control of committees which [illegible] every [illegible] speaker.

[illegible] the power of the speaker of the Ohio house of representatives has been as absolute [illegible] Speaker Cannon in the national house of representatives. The only difference has been that the game was played [illegible] on a smaller scale than at Washington.

Demand of Reform

In addition to absolute dictation in the [illegible] of committees including [illegible] chairmanship the speakers [illegible] have obstructed all [illegible] which did not suit their [illegible] or comply with the wishes of their [illegible] friends. It is this [illegible] coupled with [illegible] that promises of parcel[illegible] places on committees are [illegible] that has brought on a demand for reform.

Should the administration under the direction of Governor Harmon [illegible] in demanding the change it is believed that the reform will be [illegible] though. It will not come [illegible] without a fight. The special interests that for years have [illegible] a tremendous advantage in the general assembly by [illegible] the completion of committees [illegible] to give up without a [illegible] struggle.

[illegible] special interests have been [illegible] since the election. Every [illegible] for the speakership who [illegible] has been approached either directly or indirectly. All the leading candidates deny that they have compromised themselves in any way as far as naming the committee is concerned.

Interests Are Busy

In the [illegible] over the speakership of the next house for example the liberal interests want the promise that they will be given the authority to name the committee on temperance in return for their support. In the same manner the railway [illegible] and telephone interests are reaching out to gain a hammerlock hold on the committee on railways and [illegible] and so on down the list.

Stripping the power of naming the committees from the speaker will throw the contest for that position [illegible] in the air.

It [illegible] would smash alignment that already have been made. The reform would mean that the next speaker would be little more than moderator of the house and that the real power of controlling legislation both in the committees and on the floor would rest with the members themselves.

The [illegible] that there was to be a fight in Ohio against the system known in national politics as Cannonism [illegible] not [illegible] publicly until last night [illegible] an explanation [illegible] that Governor Harmon has heard [illegible] the efforts to secure [illegible] in connection with the [illegible] speakership.

The Argument Made

The [illegible] made that if [illegible] danger [illegible] power away from the speaker [illegible] house it also will [illegible] thing to take the same [illegible] away from the speaker [illegible] Ohio house [illegible] candidates for [illegible] about the capitol yes[illegible] with a more or less [illegible] on the governor's office [illegible] Smith of [illegible] Vining of Mercer and [illegible] of Erie county [illegible] Vining engaged in [illegible] Erie county candidate [illegible] that Vining [illegible] cut back on a [illegible] to support him [illegible] first legislative [illegible] Whatever the truth regarding the alleged pledge the meeting today brought no results. Both men will stay in the contest and work the harder to win.

Senator-elect John Stockwell had an extended talk with Governor Harmon late yesterday. Stockwell appears to have the lead by a wide margin in the contest for president of the senate. His friends are confident he will be named on the first ballot in the caucus of Democratic senators but ten votes are required to control the caucus.

HOBSON IS TARGET FOR WOMEN'S FROWNS

Captain Declares Women Drink Too Many Cocktails

New York, Nov. 22.—Captain Richmond Pearson Hobson, M. C., was today a target for feminine frowns instead of usual smiles as he took his way about town. It was because he had the temerity to intimate in a public address that he believed women drank too many cocktails. Addressing the National Society of Patriotic Women of America the captain dropped his Japanese war hobby long enough to say:

"Alcoholic poisoning is degenerating the nation and women who drink cocktails encourage men to follow their example. Alcohol is ten thousand times worse than war. It [illegible] an assassin. Absolute strict total abstinence is necessary. Destroy this destroyer or the whole human race will be wiped out.

"The Japanese and Chinese want to come to this country. They are not degenerates and do not use alcohol to excess. If we are not careful and stamp out the use of alcohol before our grandchildren have left the scene they will hear the hoof of the yellow man's horse."

OBITUARIES

The following from the Portsmouth Times of November [illegible] refers to a sister-in-law of W. B. Strayer, the late D. W. Strayer of this city and N. I. Strayer of DeGraff. A woman held in the highest regard by many friends in this city. The death of Mrs. J. P. Strayer at her beautiful home at No. [illegible]8 west Sixth street at 8:30 Saturday morning cast a deep gloom over the western part of this city where she has lived for many years. The shock was keenly felt by her neighbors and friends among whom she was so favorably known and loved. Her death though coming very sudden was not unexpected as it was known for several days that the time was short for her to live. About two months ago she developed exophthalmic goitre and this was the immediate cause of her death. Mrs. Strayer whose maiden name was Elizabeth McNichols was a daughter of John H. McNichols a prominent business man of Lexington Kentucky. She was born in that city on September 11, 1860 and there along with three sisters was reared to womanhood. On January 21, 1886 she was married to Mr. J. P. Strayer and came to Portsmouth to reside where he was engaged in business. The union proved a happy one and two children have grown up in the home to brighten and to make it happy. They are Maurice Kirby and Mary Katherine who alone remain to cheer the declining years of their father. Besides the husband and two children the three sisters survive to mourn her. They are Mrs. Fred Wiehl and Miss Mary A. McNichols both of Lexington and Sister Mary Austin of Newport Kentucky a member of the Order of Sisters of Charity of Nazareth Nelson county Kentucky. The three sisters and the members of the family were at her bedside when she passed away. The death of Mrs. Strayer is a very sad one. Mr. Strayer had just recently remodeled his home making it one of the most beautiful in the western section of the city. The two children have just grown to man and womanhood and her cares were fast fading away. The greatest sympathy is extended the bereaved family especially Mr. Strayer who has been a faithful worker in the interests of the city. He is a former newspaper man being at one time editor of the old Tribune. For several years he has been engaged in insurance and real estate business.

Nellie May Drake was born January 11, 1871 at Waldo. She was married to John Weiser July 13, 1899 and died October [illegible] 1910. One child was born of this union Leroy D. Mrs. Weiser is the second daughter of John and Mary M. Drake who are living with another daughter Miss Nora Drake at Waldo. She took seriously ill Tuesday October [illegible] and suffered severely until death came Friday October [illegible] and relieved her suffering. Her sickness was short and her death naturally unexpected. However she was prepared for the summons and entered into the place of peace triumphantly. Mrs. Weiser was a woman of great devotion, loyalty and faithfulness. Her life has been one of deep sincerity and religious fidelity. She had been long associated with the M. E. church at Waldo joining that community about twenty six years ago and in that time most of her life was spent in religious work. For several years she taught a Sunday school class and her devotion to that class was almost unparalleled. She was also a member of the Ladies Aid society of [illegible] Her life was always an enrichment to that organization. Such purity of life and noble devotion to God's work will never go unrewarded. Mrs. Weiser has gone to receive the crown of life which was laid up for her in heaven.

CRIPPEN TELLS OF HIS CRIME

Makes Confession on Eve of Execution

QUARREL WITH WIFE LEADS TO MURDER

The Confession Is a Thrilling Document

American Admits Crime, According to London Times, and It Is Said the Paper Buys Confession and Money for It Is To Go to Miss Leneve and Her Unborn Child—Story of the Confession

London, Nov. 2[illegible].—Dr. Crippen has confessed according to the London Times. The confession is a thrilling human document replete with cold callous details. It is stated that the American doctor has related the whole story of the murder.

It is understood that Dr. Crippen arranged with the Times to give it the confession in order to get money to care for his partner in flight Ethel Clare Leneve and his unborn child. He also stipulated that a portion of the money was to go to his old father in California. As an act of mercy the authorities have kept from the doctor the fact that his father died of a broken heart and he will go to the gallows without that knowledge.

The confession it is understood tells of the quarrel between Crippen and his wife caused originally by his jealousy of attentions paid to her by her male admirers. They quarreled most of the time in recent years he is reported to have said with the result that he grew to depend on Miss Leneve for sympathy.

Planning the Murder

Finally Mrs. Crippen became cognizant of the doctor's relations with his stenographer and upbraided both of them.

Following a party last January, the couple had a bitter quarrel at which Mrs. Crippen warned the doctor that she intended to complain to the authorities and have them both arrested. Because of this fact and his knowledge that Mrs. Crippen would not divorce him in order that he might marry Miss Leneve the doctor said that he began to plan to kill his wife. He did so by administering the poison and then buried the body hoping that by starting the story that he had gone to America and died there he might be able to evade suspicion.

Dr. Crippen said that Miss Leneve knew nothing of the murder of his wife and says that he was justified.

The Times does not print the confession in detail today and it is presumed that the full publication is being withheld until after Crippen's execution. Although the Times does not so state it is reported in well informed circles that the document is largely in Crippen's own handwriting and that it contains about 1,00[illegible] words.

Jack's Return

By OLIVE EDNA MAY

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Maggie was a fisher lass—that is, she belonged to fisher folk—on the Maine coast. Her work was digging for clams [illegible] them. One day a boat from a ship that had just entered the port came up to where Maggie was digging for clams. It was commanded by the third mate, a young fellow of twenty, and when Maggie stopped work and turned to look at the party stepping ashore, shading her eyes from the sun with her hand, her hair falling down on her white neck, her shapely feet without shoes or stockings, the young officer rejoiced at the sight. There was a certain native grace about her that struck his fancy. And he was equally comely.

When Jack Winslow sailed away he left his heart behind and carried a heart with him. He would not be at that port again for three years, and Maggie's friends all said, "He's time enough to get a dozen sweethearts. Sailors have one in every port." But no one said the same about Maggie. They all knew that her innocent heart having once been caught, would not swerve from the handsome sailor boy who had captured it.

Letters were not frequent between them. The young man was always moving, and communication was not easy. But when a letter came to Maggie it was all the more precious. She would hide it sometimes for a day or two that she might revel in the anticipation of what there was in it. And when touching at some foreign port Jack received one from Maggie he would go up in the foretop to read the misspelled words over and over again.

One day Maggie opened a letter from Jack after an interval of silence that had lasted three months. This was fully a month longer interval than any that had occurred. Maggie ran away to the top of a dune and sat herself down in the sage grass that was quite long enough to conceal her to read her letter. It told her that something had happened to Jack which would surely kill her love for him. He did not tell her what it was, and the poor girl was in an agony both of sympathy and of disappointment. Jack told her that he would never write her again, but he assured her that he loved her the same and would never have another sweetheart. Indeed, he added, no girl would be his sweetheart. Maggie concealed the bad news she had received, keeping it in her own innocent bosom. But those about her saw plainly that some misfortune had happened to her, and all shook their heads and said, "I told you so. A lass who loves a sailor is always to be pitied. He's deserted her, doubtless, for a half civilized creature that he has met in some port on the other side of the world."

This happened about a year after Jack had sailed away. One day Maggie's little brother Ben was throwing stones on the beach where Maggie was digging for clams. A large stone he threw with great force accidentally struck her in the temple. Maggie was laid up for a few days, when she was again at her work. But one day soon after this upon closing one eye to get a better focus on a ship that was coming into the offing she discovered a blur before the eye that remained open. It was not long before the sight of this eye—it was on the side of her head that had been hit by little Ben—was completely lost. Then it began to affect the other eye, and within eighteen months of the time the accident occurred Maggie was entirely blind.

Grave as was this calamity, it was nothing compared with Maggie's disappointment in her love. She felt that trouble as keenly as the day she received Jack's letter. She began at once to get used to her blindness, but she could not get used to the loss of her lover.

Her only comfort was that she believed Jack was sincere in saying that he would never have any other sweetheart. While her friends did not believe that the sailor was true to her in any sense, they refrained from twitting her with his unfaithfulness.

Maggie continued her work—for blind people develop the sense of touch in place of sight—and was happier while occupied than while idle. One day her mother told her that the ship that Jack had sailed in was coming into port. Maggie ran far up the beach to get away by herself. But in time she was obliged to return, and on entering the house felt herself clasped in a pair of strong arms and heard her name spoken in Jack Winslow's familiar voice.

"My trouble will not longer keep us apart, Maggie dear," he said. "It is [illegible] now. But I'm sorry for you, sweetheart, that you can't any more see the beautiful world."

[illegible]

"[illegible] and me, darling. You shall [illegible] for the rest of your life. We [illegible] with a disabled ship on the [illegible] and my share of the [illegible] will keep us comfortable."

The trouble that Jack had spoken of [illegible] was plain to all except Maggie. At Singapore he had caught the smallpox, and for want of attention his face, which had been handsome, was now a sight to behold. It was this that had induced him to break off with Maggie, but he had met one who knew of her blindness, and knowing that she would not see his ugliness, he had returned to her.

The Starling's Tongue

Starlings have a very peculiar [illegible] at the extremity of the tongue, which gives the appearance of a piece having been nipped out of it. This fact gave rise to the mistaken idea that a starling's tongue must be split before it can be taught to speak.

Red Tape and Matrimony

Some of the reasons why a Frenchman may not marry are given by a correspondent of a Paris newspaper. He has been trying to get married for three years and has not yet succeeded. French marriage law is a tricky thing to deal with. If the prospective bridegroom has not lived more than six months at his address at the time of the marriage he must get a certificate signed by the landlord and concierge of every house where he has lived previously till he gets back to one where he did live for six months. Birth certificates are required and the written consent of parents.

As no paper must bear a date more than two months old it often happens that the marriage must be postponed to get the papers renewed. The man who had been foiled for three years once succeeded in making all his papers correct when he was called up for his periodical term of military service, and this threw his papers out of date.

Another time he arrived before the mayor with his bride, but the ceremony was not performed, as a certificate of his first wife's death was not forthcoming.

Fascination of the Third Rail

"You can talk all you want about the way some people want to jump off tall buildings, but the men who walk the elevated tracks can sympathize with them," said a man the other day whose business it is to work along the elevated railroad lines and see that everything is in good condition.

"Trackwalkers often have the same impulse to step on the third rail that climbers have to jump. You walk along and see that shining rod of steel and watch the sunlight glisten on it, and then the thought comes to you, 'If I step on that it will kill me,' and then you wonder how it would feel to just put your toe on it. Of course a fellow shakes those ideas off his mind, but they keep coming back, and I have known more than one man who has quit his job because he was afraid that he couldn't fight off much longer the impulse to stand on the track and put the other foot on the third rail, and when I hear of a trackwalker being killed by the third rail I wonder if the fascination of the third rail got the better of him."—New York Sun.

The Title "Esquire"

The title esquire is derived from the French word ecuyer (a shield bearer) and originated in the old days of chivalry, when, as is well known, each knight appointed one or more persons of gentle birth to carry his shield and perform other honorable services. These persons were known as squires, or, more accurately, esquires, and were of such birth as would permit of their being in their turn created knights when they should have merited the distinction by deeds of valor or otherwise. In the reign of Richard II. the status of an esquire was granted for the first time by letters patent as a title of honor merely, no duties being attached. This method of creation is now obsolete, but it marks an advanced stage in the decay of chivalry, which decay resulted in the titles knight and esquire becoming wholly honorary.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A Lazy Man

A worthy old citizen of Newport who had the reputation of being the laziest man in all creation among them had looks so lazy indeed that he used to weed his garden in a rocking chair by reeling forward to take hold of the weed and backward to uproot it, had a way of fishing peculiarly his own. He used to drive his old white faced mare to the spot where the tautog (blackfish) might be depended on for any weight from two to twelve pounds, back(ed) his [illegible] down to the water side, put out his line, and when the tautog was safely hooked started the old mare and pulled him out.

A Slight Difference

Undue rapidity of speech or indistinct utterance often leads to curious misunderstandings. An instance of this is given by Walter Seymour in his "Ups and Downs of a Wandering Life." A clergyman he says was sent for by a sick old parishioner who was not a churchgoer and who was deaf. The clergyman said, "What induced you to send for me?" "What does he say?" said the man to his wife. "He says why the deuce did you send for him."

A Patron

"Mr. Carriman is very busy now," said the private secretary of the railroad president. "Is there anything I can do for you?"

"Oh," replied the pompous visitor, "just a friendly call. I thought he'd like to know that I ride on his suburban branch now. I'm Colonel Nuritch."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Similarity

"What a noisy thing that bass drum is," remarked the clarinet disgustedly.

"Yes," trolled the trombone; "just like a human being, isn't it?"

"Like a human being?"

"Yes; it's the one with the big head that makes the most noise."—London Telegraph.

Shaking Hands

Few people know how to shake hands well. The general run of folk either give a limp paw and allow it to be shaken or else grasp yours in theirs and nearly dislocate it with their violence.—London World.

The wise are polite all the world over; fools are polite only at home.—Bacon.

The Dangerous Leopard

Natives of all countries are unanimous in declaring that the leopard is more dangerous than the lion or tiger. They have no fear of the lion, and during the day they are not hunting it. A lion will not attack unless provoked, but a leopard is never to be trusted.

AN OLD MAID'S HERO

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.

Miss Amanda Perkins was an old maid. She had never loved. Her brother Ben, who was a farmer and a widower, took her for his housekeeper. Abe Smith came to work as a hired man for an [illegible].

It was fate that kept Amanda an old maid. It was fate that brought Abe all the way from Indiana. It was fate that finally brought the two face to face. Abe had hardly got through asking Amanda for the loan of a hoe when he found his heart turning with a strange thrill.

Two weeks after the Hoosier's appearance a band of gypsies came along the road, and in return for some cold victuals one of the women told Amanda's fortune.

"You will marry," she started off.

"It seems impossible."

"But the stars say so, and they are never mistaken."

"What sort of husband will he be?" blushingly asked the old maid.

"A hero. You will not know that he is a hero for some time, but it will suddenly come to pass. He will save your life from indignant insects. I cannot say whether they will be grasshoppers or not."

The next time Abe called Amanda looked him over and decided he was no more of a hero than the gatepost. He didn't look it nor talk it, and therefore when he told his love and asked for her hand she replied:

"I shall never marry any one but a hero."

"But I'm one. I fit into the Spanish war, and durn's save you, but how I mowed 'em down."

But Abe was thrown down. Amanda's brother liked him, but that didn't count. She had asked Ben what particular insects got indignant, but he couldn't give her the information. He had never seen a beetle or a grasshopper mad, but he had never poked either with a stick. The Hoosier had arrived in the early spring. In May he renewed his offer of matrimony. He had an affectionate disposition and $100 in his trunk.

"You are as good as any one around here, Abe," replied Amanda, "but the stars have settled it for me."

"The stars be hanged! The stars have about as much to do with marriage as the June bugs."

"But he is to be a hero."

"Well, durn it, ain't I one? I've never bragged much about how I mowed the Spanish down, but I'll say to you right here and now that I killed seventeen of 'em."

"Why, that was brave of you."

"I should remark, but I'm not boasting of it. If the battle had lasted a little longer I'd have made the number twenty."

"But the gypsy said it would be some one who would save my life. I'm kinder fond of you, Abe, but I dassn't go back on the stars and the gypsy."

Abe came over on a dozen occasions in June and said nothing further, although he was more determined than ever. It was the first of July before he got round to say:

"[illegible] it is well to be [illegible] hanging around as [illegible] is here. What's the use of fooling about a thing of this kind?"

"The hero may be along any day now," was the reply.

"Say, Amanda, that gypsy must have meant me. Sure she did. I've been counting up since I told you I had killed seventeen Spaniards, and I find the number was twenty-seven. I added them up wrong. Do you want any bigger hero than that?"

"[illegible], Abe, but how you must have fit!"

"[illegible] Well, I guess yes! I was there to do it, and I mowed 'em. Better get the preacher tomorrer."

"Nope. I've got to go by what the stars say."

There weren't any stars out next afternoon and no gypsies around when Amanda started across the meadow to gather cowslips at the pond. Swinging a basket in her hand and humming a tune, she walked straight into a bumblebees' nest. The hero was right over in the next lot giving the corn a second hoeing. He heard screams. He heard yells. He heard wails for help. He ran to the fence and saw Amanda hopping and running and dodging and using her sunbonnet as a weapon.

"Humph!" grunted Abe as he out with his knife and cut a thick topped bush. "There's the indignant insects, and by gum if here hain't the hero. Amanda Perkins, you are mine!"

There were half a hundred bumbles. They were thoroughly indignant. They made it lively for Amanda, and they had plenty left over for Abe, but a hero always conquers. The suffering hero picked the suffering heroine up in his arms and toted her to the house and dropped her on the floor to say:

"There! If you are looking for any more heroes and indignant insects I'll take you back."

"Oh, Abe, am I rescued?" was wailed.

"Yes, the biggest part of you, and don't you try it again. As soon as these lumps go down it's the preacher for us."

"Put the hero—"

"You can't see him, but he stands before you and has all the time. Durn my cats, what else can you call a feller who fit into the Spanish war and mowed thirty-five of 'em down?"

Use for Old Magazine

An old magazine is useful in the kitchen to set all hot smutty kettles [illegible] on and as a pad for an iron [illegible] pressing. When it becomes soiled and scorched the top page can be torn off, leaving a fresh clean surface.

How to Open a Can of Corn

One of the smallest of the little girls in a West Philadelphia family had often assisted her mother in preparing the meals. She observed that her mother, who was rather fat, always talked to herself when she had any difficulty in opening cans of vegetables. The little girl thought that this muttering was a part of the operation.

One day she was visiting a neighbor and went into the kitchen to help prepare a meal.

She watched the neighbor take a can of corn, apply the opener and remove the top.

"That's not the way to open a can of corn," said the little girl.

"Why, what other way is there?" asked the neighbor.

"Well, you take the can of corn and start to open it, and then you sit down and the opener slips. Then you say, 'Durn this can!' [illegible]. That's the way my mother opens a can of corn."—Philadelphia Times.

Diamonds to Lampblack

You may purchase equal quantities of carbon for 5 cents or a million dollars. A bargain hunter might invest a nickel and get a pound of pure lampblack. The million would secure a blazing diamond easily turned into lampblack—not so easily—intense heat would be required. However, coal and wood are really more valuable than diamonds. They surrender life giving heat, while the only use so far discovered for diamonds is to cut glass, and for this carborundum is a good substitute. All diamonds in existence could be annihilated without loss to mankind, but then to vaporize diamonds would be costly, as the enormous heat of 12,632 degrees F. in the concentration of an electric furnace would be required, and then you might get enough graphite to make a lead pencil or a little fine stove polish.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in Nautilus.

Mystery of the Egg

An egg for one thing is a succession of bags bagged up in one another, a series of envelopes enveloped in one another, bags and envelopes without joints, seams or openings. [illegible] puzzles when it comes to know how these bags wrap one another up. [illegible] there are eight or nine or ten of these [illegible] to be considered. Everybody thinks he knows what an egg is, and after weary reading and study in many languages he only begins to learn that he knows a tiny fraction of all the world of secrets and mysteries hidden in an egg. As full of meat as an egg is not the true comparison, but as full of mystery as an egg is nearer the truth. Eggs are the greatest puzzle in all nations.—New York Press.

Poor Pay, Poor Preach

Once upon a time there was an Indian named Big Smoke. A white man encountering Big Smoke asked him what he did for a living.

"Preach," said Big Smoke. "Me preach."

"That so? What do you get for preaching?"

"Me get ten dollar a year."

"Well," said the white man, "that's d—d poor pay."

"Umph," said Big Smoke. "Me d—d poor preach."

So runs the world—poor pay, poor preach.—Minneapolis Tribune.

"Eating Crow."

The term "eating crow" comes from an ante-Revolution history. A soldier of an English regiment stationed in Virginia shot a pet crow belonging to a farmer. The latter entered a complaint with the colonel, who sentenced the soldier to eat the crow. The farmer was left alone with the soldier to see that he did it. After the soldier had consumed a portion of the bird he took his gun, presented it at the farmer and told him to eat the remainder of the crow or he would shoot him. This was the origin of the eating crow story.

Didn't Awe Him

The members of a Greek letter fraternity from a southern university were being shown through the library of congress. They were apparently stricken dumb with admiration of the beauties of the building, but the atmosphere of awe was dispelled when one of the party, a red headed youth, exclaimed fervently:

"Gee, fellows, wouldn't this make a dandy frat house?"—St. Louis Republic.

Too Amiable

By DOROTHEA HALE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

"I hurried to you as soon as I have come. If any one else had called this morning I should have been not at home."

"What a convenient expression 'not at home.' It's like those presidents who can speak officially or as private individuals. [illegible] what's troubling you?"

"George."

"George! Has he been giving way to that violent temper again?"

"Quite the reverse. He has suddenly turned [illegible]."

"There's nothing bad about that."

"No, nothing bad except that I'm not used to it. I don't know what it means. [illegible] how to meet him. George has always been impulsive and rather quick spoken. He's keeping something from me. On Wednesdays he goes out at 8 o'clock in the evening and comes back between 9 and half past. I've tried my best to get out of him where he goes, but he won't tell me. He just purrs over me, calls me his darling—it's about worn me out—but I get nothing out of him."

"You suspect—"

"Yes, another woman."

"But do you know she exists?"

"Of course."

"Have you looked on the shoulder of his coat for powder? Lots of men have been caught that way. The woman puts her head down there, and they all use powder. You're sure to find it on his coat."

"I haven't noticed any. Besides, I can't understand this self control. A man who is in love with another woman is not usually very sensible in his treatment of his wife."

"There you're wrong. George, feeling that he is untrue to you, keeps his self control to prevent his giving himself away. A man who is doing that must be on guard. The feelings control the tongue, and the tongue is liable to betray him at any moment."

"I know George better than that. I twitted him about going out at 8 o'clock to visit a sweetheart, and he smiled at me. He may have the sweetheart, but that is not the hour at which he spends time with her. He isn't gone long enough."

"Why don't you shadow him when he goes out in the evening?"

"The only reason I haven't done it is that I don't like to do such a thing. George has always trusted me implicitly, and I don't like to commit an overt act in my distrust of him."

"You silly thing! You don't know these men. They wouldn't hesitate, any one of them, to put a professional detective on his wife. And yet you hesitate to walk at a safe distance behind George just to see that he isn't getting into mischief. Why, it's our duty to watch him. Men are like children when women get hold of them and need a nurse. Would you trust little Georgie to take care of himself? Come, get some stiffening into you. I'll help you. I'll come around this evening at 8 o'clock and be ready to wait for George when he goes out, keeping him in sight till you come out after him. Then we two will follow him and solve this mystery."

"Well, I don't like to do it and couldn't do it myself, but since you are going with me I suppose I can. Come at five minutes before 8. Go down and sit in the stoop and wait till you hear George going out. Follow him, and I'll catch up with you. I have often seen him start, and he always goes west. So I can't fail to go the right way."

That evening the two women put this plan into execution. George went out unsuspectingly. His wife's friend was under the stoop, and his wife came out within a minute after he had left the house. He walked leisurely up the street, turned several corners and finally mounted the steps of a house that was perfectly familiar to his wife.

"Oh, heavens!" she exclaimed. "He's going into Dr. Fuller's. He has some terrible disease. I'm going in to find out what it is."

"Better wait till you have him at home, when you can talk with him calmly."

"I can't wait. I'm frightened to death. Oh, what can be the matter?"

The husband had entered the house and was in the doctor's private room for receiving patients when there was a pull at the bell. Another patient, it was supposed, entered, and without waiting for her turn pushed her way into the room and fell upon her husband's neck, moaning.

"Oh, George! What is this terrible disease from which you are suffering? Why have you hidden it from me?"

George smiled and looked at the doctor, who interposed.

"Your husband, dear madam, has been showing symptoms of a breaking down of the nerves. I told him that his averting a collapse depended upon his maintaining as perfect an equipoise as possible. Any giving way to anger or other emotion might have been fatal to him. But now I am happy to say, thanks to his conquest of himself and doubtless your aid, he is so far improved that I consider him out of danger."

"Thank heaven! But why didn't you tell me, George?"

"Oh, I didn't wish to worry you. You women are such confiding, sensitive creatures. I knew that if you were aware of my danger you would wear me out with troubling about it."

Mistaken Modesty

The lesson and significance of an experience incorporated by Mr. Maurice Baring in his book, "Russian Essays and Stories," are undoubtedly the mistake of underrating one's wares. One is likely to be taken at one's word. Once when Mr. Baring was competing in a civil service examination and entered as a candidate in the German viva voce the German examiner asked him if he could speak German.

"Yes, a little," he answered modestly.

"Oh," said the examiner, "I will then wish you good morning. I will no doubt have the pleasure of seeing you again the next time there is an examination."

The next time there was an examination Mr. Baring expressed himself again. The German examiner, who happened to be a different man, asked Mr. Baring if he could speak German. He replied:

"I speak it as well as I understand it, and my written style combines the solidity of Lessing, the lightness of Goethe and the lightness of touch of Heine's, as you have no doubt observed from my written paper."

"Then I need not trouble you any further," said the examiner.

That time Mr. Baring got full marks.

A Camel's Stomach

The stomach of a camel is divided into four compartments, and the walls of each of these are lined with large cells, every one of which can be opened and closed at will by means of powerful muscles. When a camel drinks it drinks a very great deal. Indeed, it goes drinking on for such a very long time that really you would think that it never meant to leave off. But the fact is that it is not only satisfying its thirst, but is filling up its cistern as well. One after another the cells in its stomach are filled with the water, and as soon as each is quite full it is tightly closed. Then when the animal becomes thirsty a few hours later all that it has to do is to open one of the cells and allow the water to flow out. Next day it opens one or two more cells, and so it goes on day after day until the whole supply is exhausted. In this curious way a camel can live five or even six days without drinking at all and so is able to travel quite easily through the desert, where the wells are often hundreds of miles apart.

A Bit Too Clever

Holman Hunt used to tell how a carpenter viewed one of his best known pictures from a serious critic. The man was doing some odd jobs about the house and was found gazing at "The Shadow of the Cross" in the studio—the picture in which Christ, who has been sawing a plank in the workshop, rises to his full height and flings his shadow, forming a cross.

"Well," asked the artist interrogatively.

"Don't think much of it, mister," was the blunt comment.

"Why?" demanded Hunt, amused but a trifle nettled.

"Any one that can saw wood without making any sawdust is a sight cleverer than any I ever seed," was the answer.

It was true—the floor was clean beneath the bench!

He Was Cautious

Frederick the Great was always fond of disputations, but as he generally terminated the discussion by collaring his antagonist and kicking his shins, few of his guests were disposed for an argument. He asked one of his suite why he did not venture to give his opinion on some particular question. "It is impossible, your majesty," was the reply, "to express an opinion before a sovereign who has such convictions and wears such very thick boots."

Preparing Turkeys for Market

F[illegible] No [illegible] probably [illegible] matter for the [illegible] turkey [illegible] this year [illegible] to a large [illegible] of the fowl that [illegible] general weather conditions [illegible] the birds. Weather [illegible] this year have [illegible] satisfactory for turkey raising [illegible] in the spring [illegible] wet [illegible] the autumn [illegible]

[illegible] weather [illegible] to find [illegible] Thanksgiving [illegible]

[illegible] and including [illegible] in the [illegible] of honor [illegible] its standard [illegible] that this [illegible] the [illegible] turkey of the [illegible] have been [illegible] recently [illegible] has been [illegible] thinking [illegible] these past [illegible] turkey is [illegible] for there are six standard varieties the branches of the family in addition to the bronze [illegible] the slate the white and the black. Many people who may think that they have been enjoying pretty appetizing turkey from time [illegible] may be surprised to learn that the prestige of the turkey as an article of food was seriously threatened a few years ago through carelessness and lack of foresight in breeding [illegible]. Not much was said about it except in the poultry papers and at the conventions of poultry raisers but the menace was sufficient to arouse the more progressive turkey raisers with the result that they mended their ways put a ban on inbreeding and went in for the pure bred or standard bred turkey with the result that [illegible] its influence felt in infusing strength and vigor to turkey flocks in all parts of the country.

Certainly turkey raisers ought to pay attention to business for there is a tremendous and constantly increasing demand—one might almost say regardless of price—for the [illegible] bird that becomes our national bird at Thanksgiving time. All this means money of course for the turkey farmer and [illegible] profit in turkey raising [illegible] poultry [illegible] turkeys constitute the most profitable [illegible] the time the turkey is six [illegible]

And [illegible] gentle reader what [illegible]

[illegible] have learned that turkeys [illegible] with his [illegible]

Now as a matter of fact it is an unheard of [illegible] something [illegible] would be surprised what a small proportion of the final selling price [illegible]

Another factor that helps to put the price of turkey above [illegible] is found in the circumstance that nowadays a large proportion of the turkeys for city markets are shipped by express and express is of course a much more expensive mode of transportation than freight [illegible] the journey by fast freight [illegible] with each carload [illegible] is accomplished in a few hours and no feeding en route is necessary.

And speaking of turkeys [illegible] At Thanksgiving [illegible] representative American [illegible] as high as 700,000 to [illegible] of $140,000 [illegible] city [illegible] last [illegible] weighed [illegible] pounds [illegible] total the [illegible] of more than 2,0 tons [illegible] of more than [illegible] the largest automobile trucks [illegible] the express companies [illegible] delivery of turkeys and which [illegible] the railroad yards [illegible] the shortest [illegible]

[illegible] years ago when a [illegible] received a whole carload of turkeys from one shipper the event was heralded by newspapers and public [illegible] eighth wonder of the world. [illegible] the receipt [illegible] of turkeys is an every day [illegible] cities at Thanksgiving [illegible] the only really [illegible] statistics on turkey raising [illegible] subject. The United States Census Bureau is sizing up the situation in the poultry field right now and will have an impressive array of [illegible] before the public ere another Thanksgiving Day rolls around. The [illegible] however that we will find a tremendous increase over the 6,600,000 turkeys raised 10 years ago and the turkey crop then be it known was big enough to furnish cargo for half a dozen of our largest ocean liners or to make a pyramid several times as high as the Washington Monument.

It may surprise a good many readers to learn that Texas is the greatest turkey raising state in the Union producing one tenth of all the birds that find their way to market [illegible]. If you have noted the [illegible] that Rhode Island turkeys [illegible] fashionable hotels [illegible] may have suspected that most of the Thanksgiving birds came from little Rhody. But as a matter of fact the smallest state of the Union [illegible] Missouri [illegible] Iowa, Ohio and Indiana are all far ahead of Rhode Island in point of [illegible] that it is quality rather than quantity that has made fame for [illegible]. They are the [illegible] prices [illegible] for a single turkey [illegible] the best regardless of price.

The [illegible] of Picking [illegible]

The Most Popular Picking Machine

D[illegible] the cranberry sauce [illegible] this past year [illegible] two [illegible] What [illegible] that always [illegible] the best [illegible] cranberries [illegible] the cranberry [illegible] appetizing [illegible]

[illegible] pieces of apparatus [illegible] in most [illegible] strength to [illegible] long [illegible] knee [illegible] with their [illegible] are almost [illegible] representatives [illegible] physique and [illegible] peasant [illegible] whom probably [illegible] Continent [illegible] the New World [illegible] children have [illegible] and his family [illegible] take [illegible] harvesting [illegible] autumn [illegible] take for instance the situation in the old days on Cape Cod, Mass. which was then as now the greatest cranberry district. The whole countryside turned out to pick the cranberries picking them by hand one by one just as you might pick strawberries or raspberries. The people also came in droves from the nearby towns whole families coming from the cotton manufacturing centers and other New England industrial communities where work was slack or the mills were likely shut down temporarily at that season of the year and these recruits from the cities lived in tents or cottages on the bogs throughout the picking season thus combining the period of work with a camping vacation. In those days even the women in the neighborhood who were not spry enough to go in for the picking were wont to assemble to do the lighter work of sorting the berries and the scene presented was not unlike that at the proverbial New England quilting bee or sewing circle.

The scene on a typical cranberry bog today is vastly different from that of a few years ago [illegible] still [illegible] on the bogs [illegible] a sort of unwritten [illegible] shelter for his [illegible] if they desire [illegible] quarters [illegible] shacks [illegible] Sightseers [illegible] Cape Cod [illegible] Plymouth [illegible] transplanted [illegible] their [illegible] high wages [illegible] the cranberry industry.

Many [illegible] Verde islanders are [illegible] their visits to the cranberry [illegible] arriving in the spring when [illegible] the bogs opens and remaining until the end of the picking season in the autumn making the trip both ways in sailing vessels which they charter for the purpose and which are engaged during the winter months in the coasting trade on the coast of Africa. Others of this dark skinned race settle down in America for a considerable period of some years and such usually bring with them their wives and families [illegible] not common among the [illegible] merely from spring to fall. Whether they stay [illegible] the Verde islander [illegible] however he seems to [illegible] return to his home and live in the [illegible] that a little store of American [illegible] piles up wealth more rapidly than you [illegible] suppose [illegible] cranberry picker will earn all the way from $ [illegible] per day [illegible] quarters provided on the bogs.

This class of pickers have with their strength and ability [illegible] of berry picking in this industry. After [illegible] picking machines which [illegible] slow to adopt them [illegible] fearing that they would injure the cranberry vines. There are two principal styles of machines. One resembles [illegible] and with jaws which [illegible] the presence of the [illegible] which holds the [illegible]. In operation the jaws [illegible] of cranberry plants. Then the jaws [illegible] with a row of teeth [illegible] and when the machine is withdrawn the berries are [illegible] stripped from the stems [illegible] receptacle [illegible] the berries fall into the waiting measure or tray.

The other style picking machine which has been even more extensively adopted consists of a large scoop like receptacle [illegible] except in the use of the lower side which is formed from a series of [illegible] prongs set fairly close together and with the forward [illegible] to form teeth. In operation this scoop is shoved with force. It is here that muscle is requisite into the tangle of cranberry vines and when it is drawn back it is found that the vines have slipped between the closest prongs but have left the berries resting in the [illegible]. The operations of these two [illegible] are all supplemented by [illegible] power mill which [illegible] the berries when they are [illegible] as they come fresh from the hands of the pickers and removes all leaves, twigs and other foreign matter.

Of course the cranberry growers alike [illegible] of the soil have their troubles but these have grown fewer under the enlightened methods of the new era that has lately dawned in the industry. The two chief menaces of the cranberry crop are insect pests of various kinds and untimely frost which if [illegible] is harvested in the autumn [illegible] water [illegible] has been found to be the final remedy for both [illegible] and that is why we see nowadays the progressive cranberry grower installing [illegible] an up to date power [illegible] pumping plant so that he can [illegible] at short notice. With a cranberry bog or meadow covered by a network of canals and ditches it is possible to flood the bog within a few hours after the weather bureau has given warning of impending frost. The following [illegible] the water can be drawn off and the picking of the berries resumed as though nothing had happened. Similarly if the insects are attacking the berries the meadow can be put under water—just as it is all through the winter—and the tiny pests obliterated in short order. Of course such measures of relief are fairly expensive but when a man has paid anywhere from $600 to $1,000 per acre for cranberry land and expects to net anywhere from 10 to 100 per cent per year on his investment he feels like doing everything possible to insure his income.
